Hey Good luck in the "80" future. Debb

This book of our years, this black and white crystal of the color of our lives, we give, we dedicate to you. You have given of yourselves as if there were no limit, you were limitless as the sun, and you have shown us how to live and like.

Arthur, sweeping away our tears, reflecting our joys, always smile and there will always be love smiling back.

Norman, squint your eyes at us, and you will always see.

Bill, fall and we will always laugh at death.

Gatsby believed in the green light, the orgiastic future that year by year recedes before us. It eluded us then, but that's no matter – tomorrow we will run faster, stretch out our arms farther . . . And one fine morning –

So we beat on, boats against the current, borne back ceaselessly into the past.

Special Appreciation

School hours fade
As leaves lost to the blow
And caring tongues seem to die
And lose their language.

But still the thorns stick,
Implanted only by a touch.

Thank you.

Love is a smoke raised with the fume of sighs:
Being purged a fire sparkling in lovers' eyes:
Being vexed, a sea nourished with lovers' tears.
What is it else? A madness most discreet.
A choking gall, and a preserving sweet.

Rich -
We've certainly had our times but always you've known that I cared. I've felt your deep frustration and sensed at times great anger - I hope now that the pressure of high school will be gone that you will work at making yourself happy - you can you know! You are such an intense person Pursue your artistic talents to express all these feelings. Learn to like & accept yourself - you are a neat person - you know - Please keep in touch.
I'll help you

Having no formal way to express certain sentiments, certain attitudes toward our environment, the staff of Profile '80 has created a magazine in order to fill this need. In this 'magazine' there will be various representations of our culture, our school life, our artistic life, our thoughts. We have tried to find unique ways of expressing our feelings as well as those of the student body, ways of relating our mutual experience as inhabitants of this parcel of time, so you will find humorous works, serious probes, and even a photo-cartoon strip which we feel somehow expresses a little of the yearbook staff's unusual experience and possibly everyone's experience; there are some things we all share.

We have found nowhere else to express these thoughts, for although the yearbook tries to assemble a year's experience through photographs, it somehow lacks the total thought process that should support a thorough analysis. The newspaper is a publication of factual accounts and topical editorial material and lacks the color and the long-range vision such an analysis should have. The literary magazine has the emotion but little intellectual focus on the material.

We like to think this magazine compresses all these forms into one space, not by assembling a mish-mash of material, but by carefully arranging emotion, balancing it with fact, to create an image of what we see each day. The new magazine should be a microcosm of our daily life, a time capsule.

This 'magazine' – we call it a magazine instead of a section to indicate its separation from the rest of the yearbook – has been named Signature. There is an odd double meaning here: not only is a signature something peculiar to an individual at one point in his life (graphologists tell us that people's signatures change with time), but a signature is a printer's term for a grouping of 16 pages which is formed from one sheet of paper, cut, and assembled with thread and paste to form a book. This magazine, this 'signature', constitutes exactly 16 pages of our book, a book assembled with time for thread and weariness for paste.

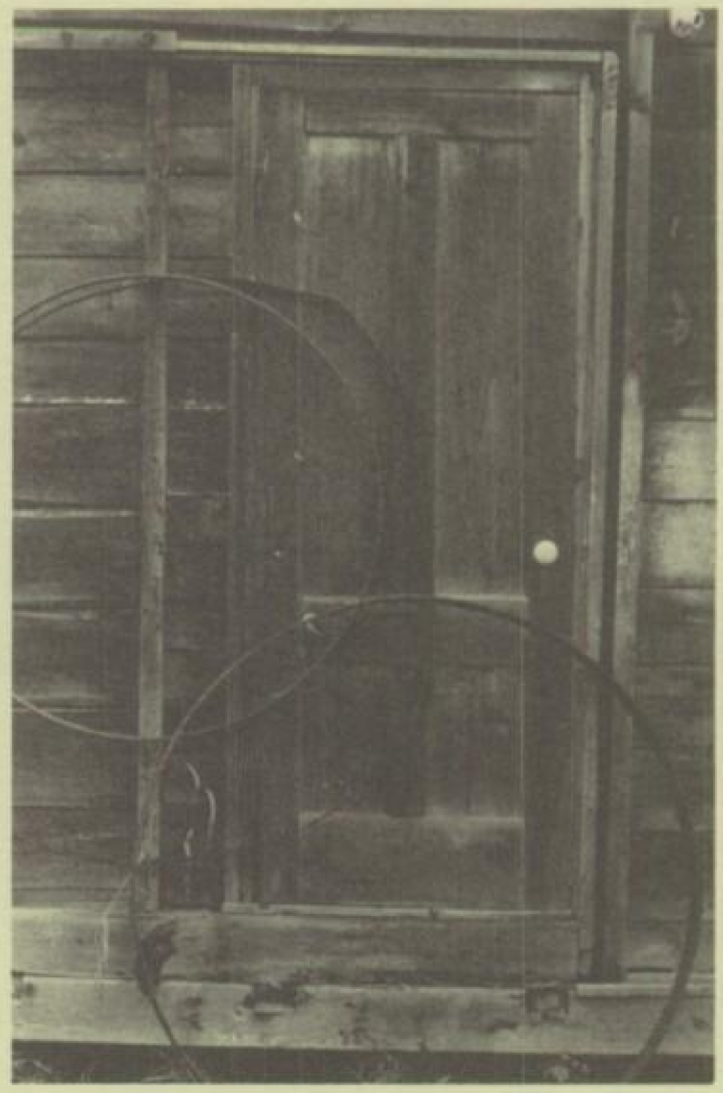
Only The Memories

I can remember the first sight of my new home. There was a huge house with chipped, dirty, yellow paint and green bordering which had a built-in garage and a short, dirt driveway in front of it. Finger-smudged windows and worn down stairs added to the lived-in atmosphere. Beside the building was a dark, green lawn ready for mowing with three trodden paths and circular dirt spaces. These I thought were bases for a softball or baseball field. Several locust trees also were growing on the lawn with a blooming apple tree in the center. When I first moved there, several children were chasing each other and screeching. It looked like a very "homey" environment then, but when I revisited a short time ago, I felt alienated. New people own that once-upon-a-time playground, and they have changed its appearance and atmosphere. New, white paint with green bordering projects from the once old, dingy house, and new, clean windows reflect the bright sunlight on sunny days. The driveway is now paved with pitch-black tar, and the landscape is so neat and trim that one would feel very awkward if he stepped on the grass. It is not familiar to me anymore.

— Christine Rice



Chris Sieverts

We grew up here
We came here with usual first day paranoia
Worrying about what we said and did Wondering if we'd be accepted by our new peer atmosphere
As the years passed by we grew closer
We became as one we laughed together and we cried together
We were a sort of family
Now the day we said we were waiting for is getting nearer and nearer The closer it gets the more we want to push it away
For now we realize we may be losing more than we are gaining.

Poetry and photographs by Babs Currier

A Conversation with the President

You don't see it or hear it in the hallways, but it's there. Like a silent, efficient machine, it works for us, even though few people know why it exists, what it does, or even how it functions. The student council.

Student council president Diane Murphy recently agreed to discuss the functions and problems of the student council with the Profile '80 staff.

The student council, Diane says, serves as a middleman. It deals with students on one hand and the administration on the other. Getting proposals through the administration can be difficult, but on the other hand, as far as student input goes, Deedee noted that suggestions have increased to the point where most ideas for proposals now come from the student body. As an example, Deedee told us that the idea for the jukebox in the cafeteria came from a student, not a council member.

The authority of a student council varies from school to school. Our council does have a say in changing school policies that seem unfair. The student council helped repeal the rule which barred Earned Time student from the library if they did not have a pass.

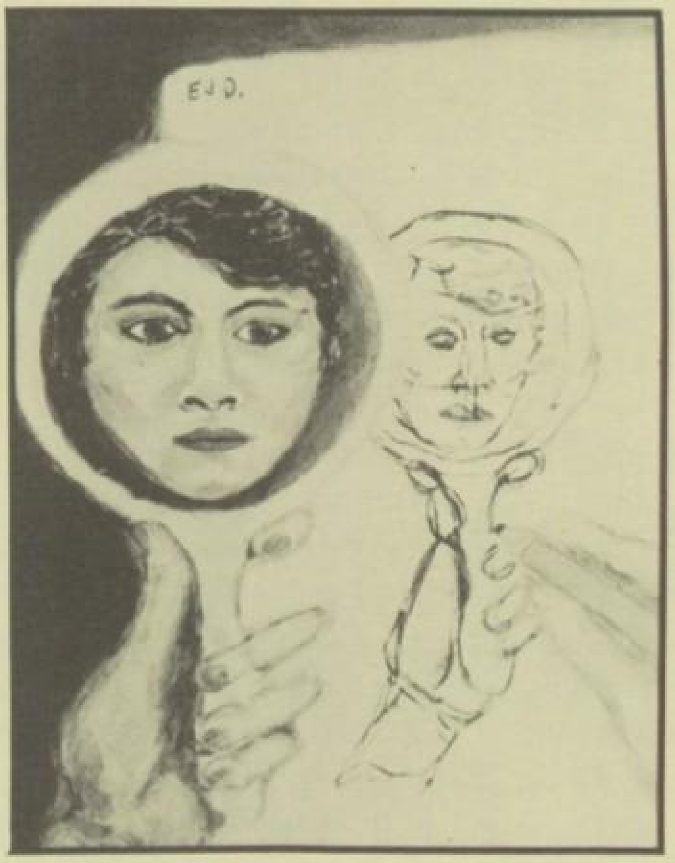
In order for the student council to try to act upon anything, members must have ideas to work with. These often come from the student body as suggestions made to student council members. All proposals are discussed at student council meetings, then voted upon. A "yes" vote means the idea is feasible enough to warrant being given further consideration. After a proposal is written and investigated, it is again voted on. If it is accepted by the council, it is submitted to vice-principal Dana McKenney and principal James Desmarais who must make the ultimate decision as to the life or death of the proposal.

Student council meetings are run by the president, who works from an agenda. Parliamentary procedure has been the rule this year at the suggestion of Mr. Desmarais, so meetings run smoothly and efficiently. Proposals to be written up are given to the proposal committee, while more committees are appointed by the president to further research other proposals.

Since meetings only last from 2:35 to 3:00 on Monday afternoons, the council must pack a great amount of business (old and new) into a very short time. Deedee noted, however, that this year's council takes its job very seriously, so work is always completed on schedule. Not even the officers get off easily. The president runs meetings and appoints special committees, while vice-president Brian Hanaford must not only attend all of these special committee meetings, but must meet with Mr. Desmarais and Mr. McKenney once a week. Treasurer Bill Hendrickson works to sort out the council's murky finances, and secretary Laurie Bickford prepares the agenda, writes the minutes of each meeting, and completes all correspondence. Since parliamentary procedure has been adopted, a parliamentarian, Ken Yeaton, has been appointed to become an expert in this area.

In addition to these officers, the Plymouth student council has had two of its members, Michelle Dunklee and Cammy Clark, elected to the state student council. Each will serve a two year term, Michelle as state treasurer and Cammy as state secretary. If this is not enough, Plymouth's student council advisor, Clementine Dugan, is also a state student council advisor.

You may not hear a lot about the student council, but that's because they spend their time quietly working instead of talking, and their quiet seems more productive than most councils' noise.



Edward O'Neill

Faces that are old, Faces that are new.
The people we know and the people we knew.
We grew together, now we're drifting apart.
Always an ending, but now a new start.
At graduation we all grow nearer
And all our friends become so much dearer.
And as we say our final goodbyes,
One last embrace and many more cries.
We say to keep in touch and they promise they will.
We talk about the "remember when's", but better still.
A place in my heart, you'll always stay.
This is what's said
as we go our own way.

!SNOW?

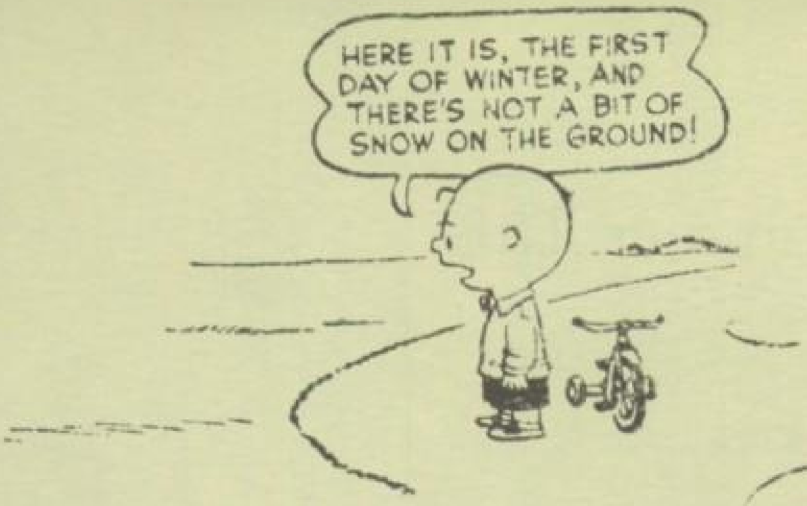
The winter of 1980 may be remembered for many things, but snow won't be one of them. In fact, the near total lack of snowfall will distinguish this winter from all that preceded it. Northern New England legend abounds with stories of notable winters. Not one of these, however, tells of a winter without snow. There was a year when it snowed every month, there have been tremendous blizzards, but never a year with as little snowfall as 1979-1980.

It all started quite differently. On October 9, before Halloween, even before the World Series, we woke up to a two inch snow cover. People braced for another long winter. Dave Berman's quote of the day was: "There's no business like snow business". Needless to say, the snow left immediately. We received only one more inch before a warm, wet, and snowless Christmas.

There were those who welcomed the lack of snow, but for skiers and tourist dependent businesses, it was like an unthinkable nightmare. A local store even printed "Think Snow" on its grocery receipts. Then, suddenly, in the middle of January, a storm hit the area. Four inches of snow were dumped on us! Road clearing crews worked past 6:15 P.M. to clear the roads. Some people even considered buying snow tires. Within days, however, the snow evaporated leaving a landscape of half snow and half ground.

A new dimension was added to the term: ski team. More time was spent carrying what little snow could be found to the newly completed ski jump than was spent on skis. The worlds best winter athletes came to Lake Placid and ended up doing their thing on man-made snow and ice.

New England couldn't even look to other areas for commiseration. The Rockies were covered with over 100 inches of snow. Indeed, a local delegation to Utah was shocked by the snow cover. North Carolina, as in tobacco plantations and car chases, received over 30 inches in one town. We even got to see snow in Teheran, Iran on the nightly news. Guatemalan exchange student, Estuardo Matheu perhaps summed the situation up best. "What's all this I hear about snow in New Hampshire?" he said.



HERE IT IS, THE FIRST DAY OF WINTER, AND THERE'S NOT A BIT OF SNOW ON THE GROUND!

Summer Last, Summer This

Our summer days pass blankly and heavily as vapor in the summer air. We kick the ground and swim in the muddy green river and sweat our days away at work in the hot kitchens of our youth.

All of us work. We worked last summer. There is a senior, for instance, 18 and tall, who worked on a farm all summer. Bringing in 90 thousand bushels of hay, building a silage pit, putting in 14 hours a day, but he liked it. He says the job gives "built-in self-satisfaction" and he wants to make it his life.

A lot of the boys in the senior class sweated last summer away, working construction jobs, carpentry jobs. One student says he moved rocks from one pile to another for the Forest Service, then moved them back. That's all he says he did.

Some guys had lighter, if not slightly more pleasant, work. One boy tells stories of working in a grocery store and of the time a naked man walked in and bought some beer and of the time the drunk man dropped a bottle of soda on the hard cement floor and how it shattered with a quick, scream-like noise.

The girls worked too. One girl cleaned offices. Some waited tables. Good money, they said. One girl worked at a boys' camp as a counselor. Two hours of "domestic work" – laundry, cleaning – one hour answering the telephone, five hours of water frolic, nights free. Easy work, she says, but not much pay. You enjoy yourself, she said.

A boy washes dishes. Another shovels gravel. One goes to his first semester of college. Five students attend summer school for six weeks; they listen to the bell in the St. Paul's chapel tower, then climb its tangled spiral staircases to watch the fireworks, mere glows of yellow, red, blue, on a foggy, hot Fourth of July night; they study math and French and ecology and Shakespeare; tears hang in the summer fog like lights.

The summer stressed variety, variety and work. Everyone was at work at their flowers like bees, buzzing and twisting the air and occasionally coming out at night, when the dark is still warm.

Now winter has faded like a train stop receding from passengers' view. And now summer. Summer pops upon us. Heat waves toward us.

One boy will farm again. Some will work construction jobs, carpentry jobs – again. The boy who last summer moved rocks for the Forest Service wants to work in Waterville Valley this summer; he's not sure.

The grocery clerk's going back to his store. The camp counselor will return to the sheets and brooms, the telephone, and the water.

One boy, who washed dishes summer last will this summer go to college to start a two-year electronics engineering degree. He has plans.

A transfer student will travel the country for two weeks, then return home where he will go to college at Rafael Landivar University. One boy wants to work in summer theatre before going to college.

"What are you going to do next summer?" "Who knows. Work. Money for college etcetera." "Work. Don't know where." "I think I might be getting a better job next summer. Maybe not." "I don't know."

People don't know. Summer is a hot chasm between a known now and a distant, hoped-for, if somewhat hazy, future.

Summer rises hot from the bed of spring, from the black bones of winter trees, from the ash of summer last, an ash that will ride the pale, pollen-yellow wind. Summer, what are you?

Night time is overtaking me as daylight falls behind.
My life is slowing, losing the sparkle and the shine.
this loneliness is beginning to encloak me,
I've begun to lose my mind.
While death is overtaking me and daylight falls behind.

– Laurie Bickford

The Old Man

The old man sat on the bench
His shoes scattered with holes,
His pants with patches.
His hat that tilted to the side
Was old,
ragged,
and beat up.
His appearance scared me at first
But as I got closer,
The sparkle in his eyes,
And the kindness in his face
Set me at ease

As he held out his hand,
I touched it
And in that instant
All I could feel was love and joy.

Slowly, a soft smile came over his face And I realized now, that that was worth more to him then anything else in the world.
And I gave it to him.

– Elizabeth Hanson

RENDS

In 1975, Lodrick Harris, a US Social Security Administration employee, was suspended for two weeks for refusing to wear a tie to work. In another case, women were banned from wearing pants or pant suits. A fellow employee, George Gallagher, appeared in court wearing a plaid kilt and Argyle socks in protest.

In 1970, Valarie Goguen, 19 years old, was sentenced to one year in jail for patching the seat of his pants with an American flag. Another youth, 18 years old, was caught wearing pants made of the flag. He was fined one hundred dollars and sentenced to thirty days in jail. In addition, he was required to raise and lower the flag each morning and evening while in jail.

Hair length also raised eyebrows. The army ruled that hair must be less than three inches long. Beards, moustaches, and sideburns extending beyond the ears were prohibited in public places. High school students were suspended and expelled for refusing to cut hair to acceptable lengths.

You've come a long way, baby.
Dr Pepper

Miniskirts were popular at the time but knee-length ones had also hit the scene. A few businesses even marketed ankle-length skirts. The confusion over what the correct hemline was grew so great that one study linked increased pant sales to it.

Curly hair styles for men gained popularity. The controversy over hair length died out after the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission ruled that hairgrooming and dress codes discriminating between men and women violate the Civil Rights Act.

In the late 1970's women's fashions started to imitate men's with skirted suits and jeans. Jeans became skin-tight, but the latest trend is toward extremely baggy ones. Men's ties, lapels, and shirt collars are becoming smaller and narrower. In general, fashions are growing more defined and restrictive instead of the loose, comfortable styles of the early part of the decade.

Rock in its various forms – hard, soft, pop-rock – is here to stay and has been for quite some time. We entered the 70's to the tune of the Beatles and left them with the BeeGees. Disco is relatively new to the United States (and to the world) but has made quite an impact.

Punk, a British import, acquired a small following and was then partly displaced by New Wave – more vague political messages set to atonal melodies.

As time goes on, the differences between rock, disco, and Punk are diminishing. Disco is smoothed-over rock with double-time jazz rhythms; Punk is political, if anti-social acid rock; New Wave is part disco, part Punk, with a pinch of avant-garde; and jazz infusion proves that jazz too is here to stay.

Soft rock is, however, and has always been, the most popular style of music. Barry Manilow lives.

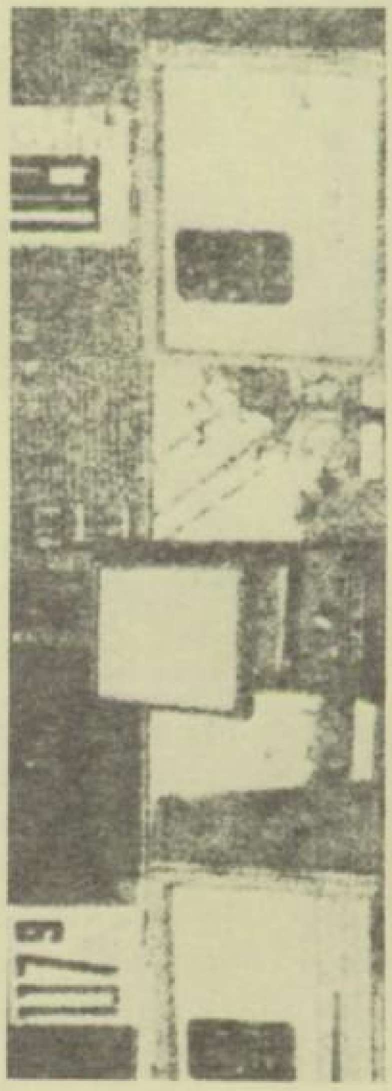
70's

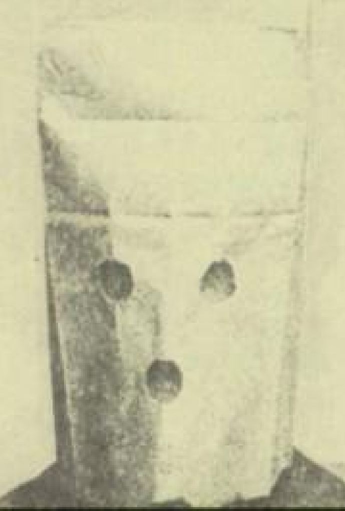
For better or worst, we have spent most of our lives and education in the seventies, and they are going to have a major effect on our future.

When the seventies began, we were in the second grade. The sixties were still a way of life for us. Attica, Kent State, riots, Vietnam at the dinner table, and the Pentagon Papers were an everyday part of life for us, although they seemed meaningless at the time. Vietnam finally ended, though, and the seventies began to take hold. Watergate was only the worst of a wave of political scandals. There was another Middle East war, and we learned the meaning of "Energy Crisis" as the Arabs began to use their oil muscle. Nixon and his cronies left in 1974, and Jerry Ford, Win buttons, and killer golf entered. Mao died and Generalissimo Francisco Franco is believed to have passed on. Idi Amin, Pol Pot, and Jim Jones took their best shots at infamy, while Squeaky Fromme took hers at the President.

In 1976 we had a bicentennial and celebrated 200 years of independence. Jimmy Carter reached the White House and was followed by CB radios, Miss Lillian, and brother Billy's beer. The late seventies were a time of relaxation. People found innumerable ways to spend their leisure time while ignoring the ever worsening world situation. Three Mile Island shocked us just when we were beginning to worry about energy alternatives. Then the bubble broke. Gasoline went up to $1.00 a gallon. The embassy hostages were taken in Teheran, and Afghanistan was overrun. The draft looms large in our future.

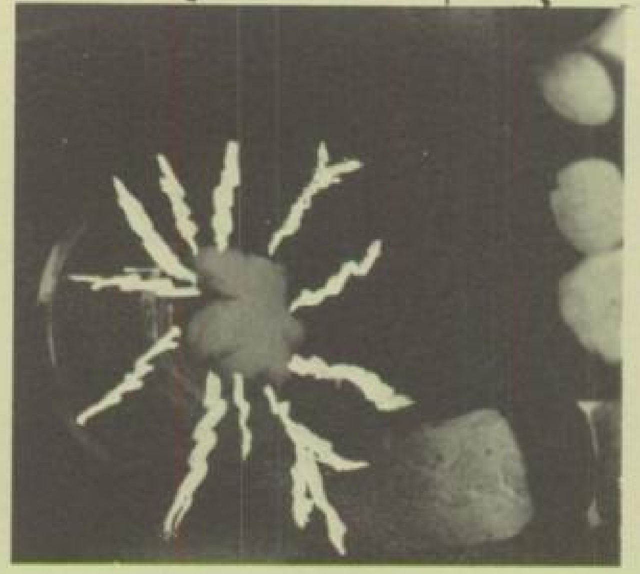
Many things have changed in the seventies, but we are still no closer to World War III than we were in 1970, or for that matter, 1962, when we were born. Let's hope this trend towards diverting disaster continues.



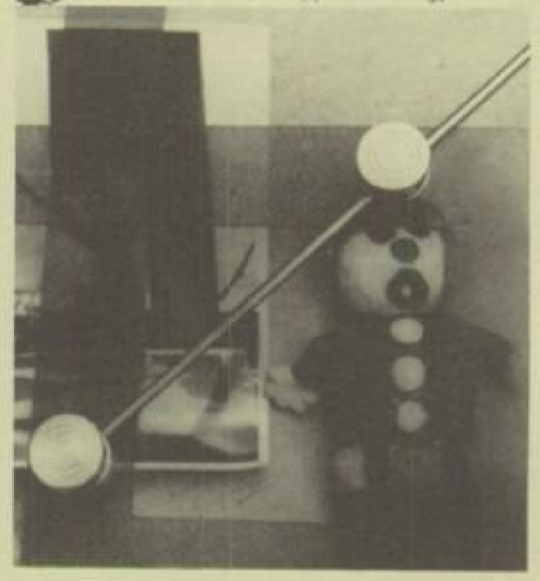


Hey Boys + Girls, It's Mr. Bill !!!

Say, Mr. Bill, let's see how this yearbook is being put together.



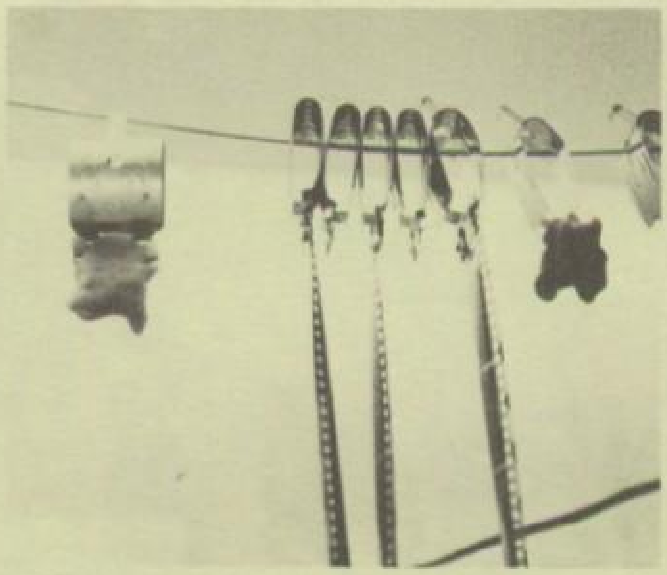
But first, why don't you turn on the radio. Electrician Sluggo just fixed it.



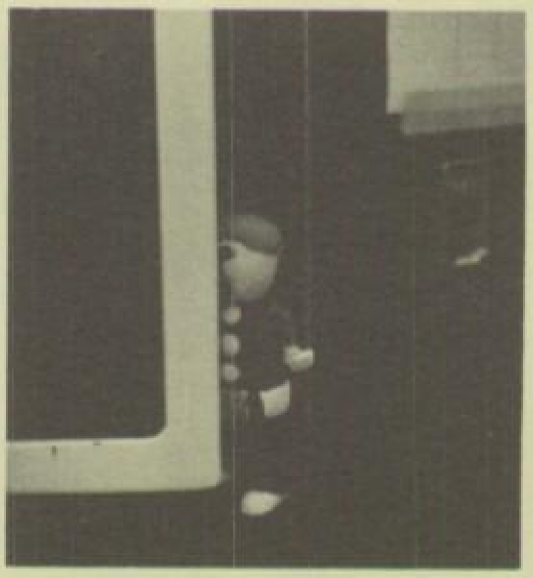
Now let's get down to work. This is how we use a cropper.

D BY THE 1977 YEARBOOK STAFF

Let's look for some pictures in the files.



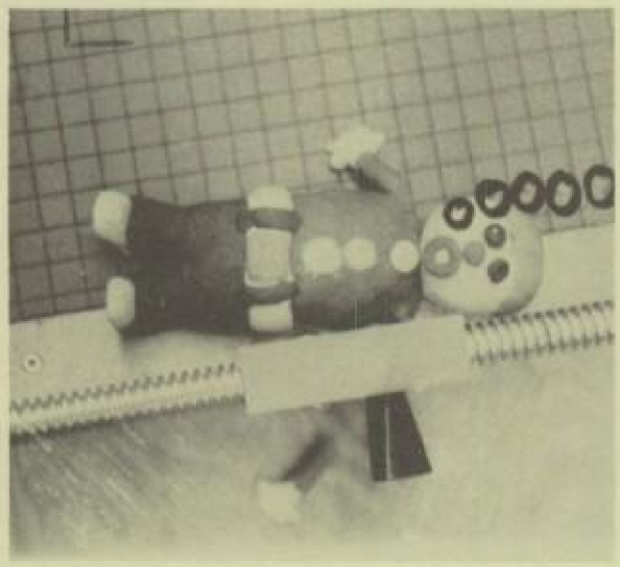
Don't worry, Mr. Bill, all he needs is a little air.



You look like you need a cold soft drink.

But, Mr. Hands, You're Hurting Spot!

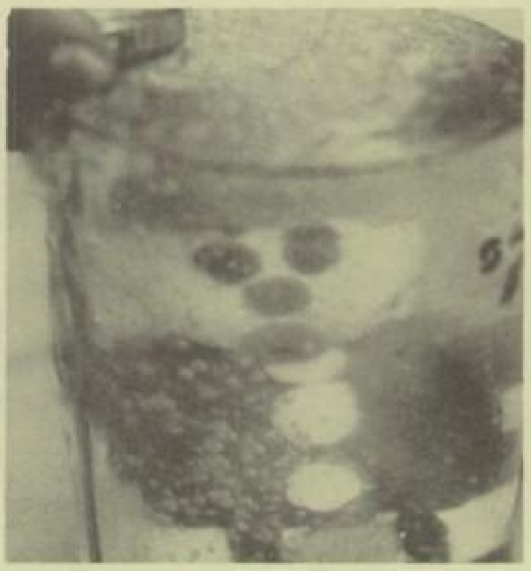
Oh nooo, I don't want any SoFt



It's time to print some pictures. First, let's cut some paper.

Developer 1½ min

Now we'll develop a picture. Aw, Mr. Bill, you've fallen into the developer.



We'll have to wash you off. Ten minutes in the film washer should do it.

Let's look at the final result . . .

Rick,
You're an awfully strange person, almost as strange as myself,
Bob Batchelder

Thank you to Charles Schulz and the United Feature Syndicate, Inc., for the use of the Peanut's cartoon.

Thank you John.

We've partied a few times together and they've been real
I hope the future is good to ya.

Rich,
I haven't seen much of ya, but the times we had were fun
Remember next time Mr.
Mclappe catches us dont forget to hide the elastics and the stack of paper.
Good Luck
Mike Royea

Rich.
Your been a real good friend to me ever since I came up here. I wish I could have been as good to you.
I'm gonna miss you alot.
If you ever decide to take off come down and visit me. You're always welcome crash at my house.
Love ya! Babs

Rich:
I hope to see you around. And I'm sure I will. Good luck in the future.
